Memorias de un bailarín

Víctor Ullate, una leyenda de la danza, bailarín, coreógrafo y maestro, rememora su vida en el transcurso de una intensa jornada.

Mientras da clase a sus alumnos, ensaya con su compañía, asiste a la representación de su obra Samsara y recibe el aplauso del público, su memoria viaja a través de su infancia, sus primeros pasos profesionales en la compañía de Antonio Ruiz Soler, sus triunfos con el Ballet del Siglo xx de Maurice Béjart, sus sinsabores como primer director del Ballet Nacional Clásico y la aventura de crear y mantener en auge durante veinticinco años a su propia compañía: el Víctor Ullate Ballet - Comunidad de Madrid.

De este viaje en el tiempo surge un retrato poliédrico de Ullate el gran bailarín y maestro, pero también de Víctor el hombre, siempre en busca de sí mismo, y de la danza, el arte que expresa todo lo animal y lo espiritual del ser humano porque olvida lo racional, que es la palabra.
